and permanent repose from the strife and controversies which have so long and so sadly agitated us.

I agree with you entirely that the condition of Kansas, under present circumstances, is not to be decided by rifles, muskets, or bowie-knives. The peace and security of the actual settlers ought to be provided for without delay by the National Government, and I am glad to see an intimation that if our friend Mr. GARRETT's proposal to convene the veteran and gallant SCOTT for that purpose is not to be adopted, a similar duty is to be committed to General PERSIFOR FRAZER, in whose discretion, impartiality and energy, I have the highest confidence. The arbitrary and abhorrent laws of the Territorial Legislature, to which Mr. CLAYTON has freshly called the attention of the Senate, ought certainly to be abrogated at the earliest day, and some mode adopted for giving the people of Kansas an opportunity of declaring, if they have not sufficiently done so, their own deliberate will as to the future condition and character of their infant Commonwealth. And if the South, while refusing to yield, (as you say she will,) to any renewed application of the territorial restriction contained in the Missouri Compromise, could yet be induced to acquiesce without a struggle in the operation of those physical and moral causes which seem so likely to make Kansas a State for free labor only,—the day would not be far distant when we might look for a complete restoration of kindness and concord throughout the Union. By such a course, the South would have abandoned no principle, in my judgment, would she have sacrificed any substantial interest;—while all nerve would have been removed for the idea, that a compromise of more than thirty years' standing had been swept out of existence by a strong hand, in order to subserve a purpose of sectional preponderance or political supremacy.

At all events, I heartily hope and pray that Kansas may soon cease to be the scene of "fraternal bloodshed," and that violent men of all parties and sections may be disappointed and defeated in the blaze of civil war. To this end, I am persuaded, that few things will conduce more than such calm, conciliatory and patriotic appeals as these which your letter contains. I thank you once more for giving expression to them, and for connecting my name with your own in such an effort to revive a "spirit of peace, of ancient brotherhood, and of fraternal deference and conciliation derived from the example and conduct of our fathers."

Retired like yourself, though after a much briefer and humbler career of service, from all public employment, and without a wish to return to it—having neither personal ambition nor private ends to gratify—I cannot yet be indifferent to the perilous issues of the present moment, and no regard to a mere temporary popularity will prevent me from uniting with you in a common remonstrance of every form of violence by which our Union and our domestic peace are endangered—whether of the rifle or the revolver, the bowie knife or the blunderbuss, or of that "little musket," which the Apostle tells us, sometimes "setteth on fire the course of nature." Believe me, dear Sir, with great respect and regard, most truly and faithfully, yours,

ROBT. C. WINTHROP.

The Burlingame and Brooks Affair—Opinions on the Subject—Return of Burlingame.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 23.

The excitement relative to the Burlingame and Brooks affair is quieted to-night. The opinion among Northern men is remarkably unanimous in support of BURLINGAME's course. Southern men say little on the subject, that I can hear.

BURLINGAME, having been informed by telegraph that BROOKS declines the meeting in Canada, will be here to-morrow. S.

The Affair of Honor—Instructions to the Jury in the Herbert Case.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 23.

A telegraph dispatch was received here to-day from Mr. BURLINGAME, at New-York, saying he intended forthwith to return to Washington, as Mr. BROOKS had failed him. A reply was sent to him to pursue his journey to Canada and await the appointed time, but some of his friends anticipate his return to this city to-morrow. Meanwhile the officers are still on the look-out for him.

The Criminal Court was eight hours in continuous session to day. The time was consumed in discussion as to what should be the character of the instructions to the Jury in the Herbert case. Each side has submitted a set, on which the Court will decide to-morrow.

XXXIVth CONGRESS—First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 23.

NEW NEW YORK MAIL STEAMER.

Mr. SEWARD presented an invitation from Mr. VANDERBILT to Senators to visit, on Saturday morning, his new ocean steamer, lying off the Arsenal, stating that facilities would be offered for that purpose.

RIVER IMPROVEMENTS.

The House bill relative to the improvement of the Savannah River was passed.

MESSAGE FROM FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS.

Mr. MALLORY, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported a joint resolution, authorizing the acceptance by Lieutenant MAURY and other Naval Officers, of medals from Foreign Governments for service to science and humanity. Passed.

PRIORITY OF BUSINESS.

A long debate followed, concerning the priority of business, during which Mr. WELLER said that to-day had been assigned by the Democratic Caucus for the consideration of the Pacific Railroad bill.

Mr. TRUMBULL protested against the majority meeting in secret to decide the order of business. They might as well expel the minority at once.

Mr. WELLER explained that the object was to dispatch business in a systematic way, instead of wasting time discussing its priority.

Mr. CLAYTON sold for the remainder of his public life he should always vote as he pleased, without being the slave of any party.

Mr. DOUGLAS justified the caucus, in order to defeat the policy of the opposition, who desire action on public business.

Mr. FESSENDEN, on behalf of the minority, denied that they ever avowed such a policy, or were actuated by such a desire.

Mr. DOUGLAS thought everybody who had witnessed the course of the minority would have a right to infer from their action that such was their policy. He was willing that the public should decide the question whether he was correct or not.

Mr. WELLER withdrew his motion to take up the Pacific Railroad bill, finding that the day was likely to be fruitlessly consumed.

The bill continuing the improvements of Sheboygan Harbor was discussed and passed. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 23.

EVENING SESSIONS.

On motion of Mr. HASKINDALE, a resolution was adopted providing for evening sessions this week, for general debate only.

UNDERVALUATION OF MERCHANDISE.

The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, recommending such legislation as would more effectually prevent the undervaluation of merchandise.

THE NEBRASKA CONTESTED SEAT.

An ineffectual effort was made to reconsider the vote by which the House yesterday confirmed Mr. CHAPMAN, delegate from Nebraska, as entitled to a seat.

A resolution was passed, paying Mr. BENNETT, contestant, mileage and per diem to date.

The Speaker laid before the House an invitation from Commodore VANDERBILT to visit his new steamer.

THE NEW-MEXICO CONTESTED SEAT.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the New-Mexico contested election case.

By unanimous consent the Clerk read a statement from Mr. GALLEGOS, in which he says he should be happy to present himself in Congress, and that the errors and fraud which certain Territorial laws permitted were which certain Territorial laws permitted were [illegible] to prevent the [illegible] of his election. He [illegible] to regard to the course of events which he had been encouraged to expect from all the Representatives of a free and magnanimous people. He avows that making speeches is not the chief or vital function of a Delegate, and denies that the influence of the Roman Catholic Church was brought into the contest to secure his election, saying that the most French Bishop interrupted, by himself and priests, not to support but to crush him.

Mr. OTERO (the contestant) during his reply said Mr. GALLEGOS should have spoken to a school, instead of the English language. Some attempting to represent New-Mexico in Congress. The sitting delegate (GALLEGOS) had appealed to the magnanimity of the House, but he (Otero) demanded justice, and failing in this would scorn to ask a favor. He would never surrender this, so help him God! He was the first native of New-Mexico who had addressed the American Congress in the language of the Constitution and the laws. It may seem should say he was a demagogue he would treat him as a calumniator and a villain. The Bishop referred to by Mr. GALLEGOS had displaced those priests who disgraced the religion they professed by indulgence in vice in all its aspects, and filled their places with others, and established schools on a good foundation. It was not surprising that bad priests, so longer able to retain their wicked ascendency, should find fault with the Prelate.

MR. OTERO CONTINUED.

The resolution declaring Mr. GALLEGOS was not and that Mr. OTERO was, elected delegate was adopted, and Mr. OTERO was sworn in.

PRINTING THE KANSAS REPORTS.

The Committee on Printing reported a resolution, which was adopted, to print 20,000 copies of the reports of the majority and minority of the Kansas Investigating Committee, and 100,000 copies without the journal, for the use of members. The former cost 61 cents and the latter 9 cents apiece.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, and took a recess till 7 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

There was a slim attendance.

SURPLUS LANDS TO PRIVATEERS.

Mr. DAVIS (Mass.) spoke in favor of the bill heretofore introduced by him, giving Privateersmen Bounty Lands, and placing them on an equality with soldiers and sailors. He stated that 18,000 of them were employed in the War of 1812, of whom probably not more than 1,000 were now living. He colonized their services, which, he contended, had not been sufficiently appreciated.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

Mr. HAY argued against Slavery extension. He said he could assign no reason why his party was called Black Republican other than that the people of the North tamely submit to the Fugitive Slave Law, and subject themselves to be negro catchers for the South. He predicted that next November the Democratic Party would be among the things that were, and a Republican placed in the White House, who will stand on the broad basis of the Union.

Mr. VALK—Who's that?

Mr. HAY—FREMONT, Freedom and liberty. (Laughter.)

Mr. BARKSDALE argued that Know-Nothingism at the North is abolitionized, and expressed the opinion that Mr. FILLMORE was the man for the times on account of his unanimous vote in the South. In condemning the Republicans he said, if Mr. FREMONT, by any possibility, should be elected, he would select his entire Cabinet from the North.

Mr. STANTON asked Mr. BARKSDALE how he knew that?

Mr. BARKSDALE—Because no Southern man would disgrace himself by accepting such office. [Applause in the gallleries.] He said the Democratic Party was national and progressive, and that under it Cuba would be acquired. He anticipated its triumph in the coming election.

Mr. CLAWSON condemned the Administration and its co-laborers for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and spoke in general disapprobation of the Democratic Party and its measures.

Mr. DEAN spoke of Slavery and its extension.

Mr. STEWART replied, arguing that Slavery had been beneficial to the country, and was promotive of the happiness of the negro race. Adjourned.

Reported Challenge from Mr. Barnett to Mr. Buchanan.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 23.

Letters have been received here, stating that a challenge has passed between Messrs. BUCHANAN and BOCOCK. The latter was not in his seat yesterday, and he is said to have left Washington accompanied by General LANE.

American Mass Meeting.

TROY, N. Y., Wednesday, July 23.

The Americans held an immense mass meeting in this city last evening. From six to eight thousand people were present. Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS, of New-York, was the principal speaker. Large delegations attended from Albany, Cohoes, Lansingburg, Waterford, Westport and Green Island.

Fire at Toronto.

TORONTO, Wednesday, July 23.

At 1 o'clock this morning, a large fire occurred in King-street, in this City, destroying a number of frame buildings, offices, a lumber yard, &c. The theatre narrowly escaped. Loss $50,000.

Arrival of the Florida at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Tuesday, July 22.

The Florida has arrived here, after a fine passage from New-York.

A Brief Statement of a Recent Occurrence.

Says BROOKS to BURLINGAME, my dear fellow,
Let's settle our affair by the duello;
Says BURLINGAME to BROOKS, agreed, come, let's,
We'll go right off to Canada, I guess.
Says BROOKS to BURLINGAME, I cannot stile
My apprehensions of your ugly rifle;
Besides, to travel among those blamed Free-Sollers,
Would go well nigh, I fear, to burst my bollers,
And though I sin't, at home, opposed to strife,
To fight so far away might cost my life.
And thereupon, without delay or stint,
BROOKS puts the whole affair at once in print.
The Public read and stare, and wonder whether
A fighting man ever before took such pains to flourish a white feather.

The Meat Market.

A fair evidence of the improved condition of business affairs is found in the fact, that even in this dullest season of the year, we are not only receiving but consuming a much larger number of Beef Cattle and Sheep weekly than the average weekly receipts for all of 1855. This average was 3,225, and our Cattle Market report shows 3,379 for the present week, and 3,652 for the previous week. These have all been sold, and prices closed a little up last night. The receipts of Sheep and Lambs have been fair, with a little higher prices. For particulars see the reports in another column.

Niblo's Garden.

Miss EMMA STANLEY, whose excellent entertainment has given unqualified delight to crowded houses, takes her benefit to-night, and makes her last appearance in the "Seven Ages of Woman."

☞ The Republican Rally at Peekskill, for Free-Soil, Freemen, Free-Speech, and FREMONT, came off last evening. Speeches were made by Gen. NYE of New-York, Hon. E. D. CULVER, of Brooklyn, and JOHN C. TRESWOOD, Esq., of Virginia.

The Board of Health.

The Commissioners of Health met again yesterday at the Mayor's office.

The bark J. H. Kent, from Ponce, P. R.; bark C. S. Fletcher, from Sagua la Grande, Cuba; schooner Madora, from Jacmel, St. Domingo; bark Louisa, from Rio Janeiro, via Bermuda; and steamship Quebec City, from Havana, were all ordered to be cleansed and fumigated, and to be then allowed to come to the City at the discretion of the Health Officer.

Brig Queen Vere, from Cienfuegos; brig Mary Ann, from Cienfuegos; brig Rosie, from Trinidad, laid over from Tuesday, were ordered to discharge cargoes, to be brought to the City by lighters.

Schr. Nicolas Ballouh, from Para, Brazil, allowed to proceed to Constitution—her bilge not to be landed in the City.

Brig Rosa, from Trinidad, having been two weeks at Quarantine, discharged cargo and otherwise complied with the section of Commissioners—is allowed to proceed.

Brig Amazon, from St. Jago de Cuba, having discharged cargo as ordered, is left to proceed at discretion of the Health Officer.

Bark Frank Bird, from Havana, arrived July 1, and anchored in Quarantine ground, having discharged and remained twenty-three days, it was deemed advisable to punish her to come up, which was done.

The case of brig Sigar Alma, from Havana, was laid upon the table until to-day, for the purpose of learning additional facts regarding her.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Published.

[illegible] meeting was reported [illegible] of this association last evening, in the Academy Hall, No. 663 Broadway. A brass band was engaged, and 1,500 voices joined in the music to a campaign song to the air of the "Marseillaise." A more attractive or enthusiastic political assemblage we do not remember.

Judge GEWIN was the first speaker. Kansas was his theme for the first half hour. He warmed with his subject. His speech was anything but declamatory; it was a quiet, logical and forcible appeal to the intellects of an intelligent auditory.

The Chairman stated that Mr. AUSTIN BURKMAR was in town, (loud cheers,) and that a deputation had been sent to invite him to address the meeting. (Cheers.) In the meantime, there present were invited to join the chorus of another song, after which it was hoped Mr. HORACE GREELEY would address them.

The song was given with good will; but Mr. GREELEY not having arrived, Mr. LINCOLN (announced as from Tazewell-Half 10 raised as his text, thereat, and talked very cleverly against time.

Mr. LINCOLN made a clean breast of all his political sins and heresies. He regretted being compelled to leave a party which gave to the country JACKSON and JEFFERSON; but now that the Democratic Party had been emasculated of every principle that conferred glory upon its earlier history, he found it imperative either to forsake that party or be traitor to every honest conviction. Mr. LINCOLN traced the history of Slavery agitation, and was frequently and loudly applauded. His principal point appeared to be, that Slavery is essentially oppressive; but his witticisms were awfully dreary.

There was a slight attempt at a row, got up by an ardent Know-Nothing, but it soon subsided to the chanting of a song—which was received with most vociferous applause.

"The old gray horse is a well-known hack
And long has fed at the public rack."

But still HORACE GREELEY didn't come, and the Chairman informed the meeting that Mr. HAMMOND and Gen. BROOS were unavoidably prevented from attending. While a comic song was in progress Mr. GREELEY came in. There was a tremendous cheering of course, but it didn't long interrupt a capital parody on "Villikins and his Dinah."

Mr. GREELEY alluded to the encouraging indications attendant on the present contest. The young men are with us; so, also, literary men, men of education, thought and culture, gravitate to this side. With us are, also, the merchants. To keep Slavery just where it is, was what New-York has uniformly voted for. Now, why should the Union be dissolved if she should go on as she has always done? The creation, expansion and prosperity of large cities were incidental to Freedom, and demonstrated by experience; while the slave policy needed no more significant illustration than the predicament of any of the Slave States. Slavery formed the staple of the speech upon which, though some striking things were said, the argument presented little of novelty in its forms of illustration.

The excitement was protracted to a late hour. A workingman from the body of the meeting was speaking at 11 o'clock, and the utmost enthusiasm and harmony characterized the proceedings.

THE TENTH WARD GERMAN REPUBLICAN ASSOCIATION held their weekly meeting last evening at their rooms, Forsyth-street, Hans HAFFNEGGER in the Chair. The Republican movement is progressing rapidly amongst the Germans of that District, and the Association already numbers over 150 members.

TENTH WARD REPUBLICAN RATIFICATION MEETING.—A meeting was held last evening at No. 374 Grand-street, to ratify the nomination of FREMONT and DAYTON. D. S. HAYWARD presided, and addresses were made by Dr. SHOMMAKER, and Messrs. HENRY S. SMITH, W. R. JONES, and others.

Interesting to Railroad Travelers.

A curious question of law has been under consideration by one of our Judges for some time, and which presents some features of interest to travelers by railroads.

The Erie Railroad has been in the habit of charging an additional price for all tickets not purchased at the ticket office. Several persons, ignorant of this rule, tendered their pay to the conductor of the car as he passed along, and found themselves compelled to pay this usurious interest. In June, a Mr. AUSTIN took his place in one of the cars of the company without purchasing his ticket. The distance of his trip was three miles—the price, ten cents. When the conductor came to him, he offered the ten cents, but was asked for an extra dime. Finding that this mode of traveling would become expensive, he refused to pay, and was shown the door. He brought an action to recover damages; judgment was rendered in his favor for $25 and costs, the Court deciding that the statute did not authorize the company to demand more than three cents per mile, and that all further charge was illegal, and consequently that they had no right to ask the sum in question.

Almost a Row.

The Board of School Officers of the Fourth Ward held their usual monthly meeting in William-street School-house, on Monday evening last. Before proceeding to business it was suggested that hereafter the public generally be invited to attend all the school meetings, and a resolution to that effect was carried unanimously. A discussion arose on the adoption of the minutes of the previous meetings, the question being whether notice should be taken on a protest, duly entered, declaring a former special meeting informal. The Chairman ruled the question out of order. Discussion was entered into on the matter, and the Chair was sustained.

During the transaction of the usual business, Mr. HAGGAN called the attention of the Board to the alleged high-handed and outrageous way in which matters were disposed of. In the course of his remarks he touched on the subject of the proposed purchase of a site for the erection of a new school-house. [illegible] Mr. HAGGAN [illegible] the question supplied, if he supposed to [illegible] Mr. HAGGAN [illegible] Mr. [illegible] commenced him, but the disorderly member insisted on his rights to speak, whereupon Alderman HEALY buttoned up his coat, rolled up his sleeves, and placed himself in a pugilistic attitude, but after a few moments of reflection quiet was restored and the Board soon afterwards adjourned.

The Late Forgery at Brady's.

Some weeks since, as will be remembered, a forged check for $10, on the Mercantile Bank, of this City, was presented to Mr. BRADY, the Daguerreotypist, purporting to be signed by Mr. FERNANDO HUNSON, of the New-York Herald, in favor of an assistant editor of that establishment. Subsequently, on the affidavit of a man with a great many aliases, who is now confined in the Tombs under two charges of forgery, Mr. MARVIN MASON was arrested as the forger of said check. He was yesterday examined before Judge WELSH, when over a dozen witnesses, who had long known Mr. MASON, testified that the check and the note accompanying it were not in his handwriting. Mr. H. L. CLINTON conducted the defense, and obtained for Mr. MASON an honorable acquittal. The charge was, undoubtedly false, and Mr. MASON left the Court without a stain upon his character.

A Nuisance Abated.

The old North American Hotel, at the corner of Bayard-street and the Bowery, which the Tenement Committee found in the most filthy condition a few weeks since, has lately fallen into new, and it would appear, better hands. The property was for a long time in the possession of the Reynold heirs, and during the past year has been litigated in Court, when no one seeming to take charge of it, the rooms were used as a free residence by houseless tenants, or as receptacles for filth and rubbish. The Tenement Committee found the lower part occupied by a [illegible], and the upper rooms by a model artist, several rag pickers, and different tribes of many dirty [illegible]. The City Inspector ordered the premises cleaned out [illegible]. It was reported that German Rew had purchased the property for his own, but Mr. FAY, of Front-street, was the purchaser. The building has been painted externally and quite improved in appearance, but of present stands without a tenant. Most of the partitions, inside, all the stairs, and the window sashes in the rear were carried off last year during the reign of terror. The internal aspects relume decay.

The Lost Telegraphic Cable.

We have already told how the telegraphic cable lost from the steamer Adger while attempting to lay it between Cape Ray and Cape Ratoon, has been recovered. It was insured in Lloyd's for $10,000, but the underwriters refused payment, asserting that the cable was safe at the bottom of the ocean, where it was designed to be put. The matter was subsequently compromised by the payment of $6,000 and the abandonment of all claim on the old cable. A short time since, the New-York and Newfoundland Telegraph Company hired one the big boats, at Sidney, Cape Breton, for the purpose of recovering the submerged cable. She sailed about the 20th June, fitted up with a powerful capstan and some fifty men. Commencing at the end which was secured to the shore at Port Ray, they dragged along the bottom of the sea, and on the 12th of June, and on the 14th, they grew until the last of July, when a violent gale came.

After the weather became so severe that it was impossible to work the capstan, the vessel rode at anchor, fast to the cable, for some six hours, when the cable parted from the intense strain upon it, and the vessel narrowly escaped going ashore. The brig finally succeeded in reaching Sidney, to take on board the portion left at that port, being the part retained on board at the first catastrophe, and which, makes, with the part now recovered, about fifty miles.

It is presumed that by this time the vessel is [illegible] on her way to this City. The value of the recovered cable, together with the amount realized from the underwriters, will, it is supposed, equal the amount originally paid for the whole. The chartering of the brig, and other incidental expenses, amount to some $2,000.

This cable weighs about four tons to the mile, and has three insulated copper conductors. It is entirely unaffected by the action of the sea. No effort will be made to obtain the portion still lost, even if it could be found, its removal might interfere with the new cable just laid.

Admissions to the Free Academy—Official Statement.

The following is the official statement as drawn from the books of the Free Academy in relation to the comparative number of pupils entered by the various Grammar Schools after the late examination. The number of applicants for examination on matter was 458; of this number 89 were rejected and [illegible] were admitted. Of the successful candidates, [illegible] chose the ancient course of studies, and 173 chose the modern course.

The following schedule contains the number of candidates admitted and the schools from which they came:

School.	Admitted.	School.	Admitted.	School.	Admitted.
1	11	10	1	17	5

Total					[illegible]

Of this number, 202 were from five schools, two of which, Nos. 35 and 46, represent a larger per centage of admissions upon the number sent than has ever been attained heretofore. Mr. SMITH sent from No. 35 thirteen per cent, and Mr. SCOTT sent from No. 46 about eleven per cent of his, and three of them were admitted to an advanced class, passing a double examination in fact, which makes the success of these two rival schools nearly equal this year. Messrs. MORTIMER of No. 17, HARRISON of No. 47, and Mr. FOULKS of No. 48, were the three next highest. Schools Nos. 8, 6, 9, 12, 21, 30, 34, 38, 44, 37, 33, 36, 39, 43, 45, 46 and 41, presented no candidates for examination. J. O. NODYNE,

School Receptions.

NO. 11—SIXTEENTH WARD.

Mr. McNary's Boys' Grammar School, No. 11, in the Sixteenth Ward, gave their second annual reception, preparatory to the approaching vacation, yesterday morning. Some fine singing and declamations were given. The discipline and organization of No. 11 is, in some respects, the most perfect that has been yet attained. The military drill used in the changing of the classes, first introduced here, has been very generally imitated in the Schools of the City, but no where with more success than here.

NO. 44—FIFTH WARD.

The pupils and school officers of No. 44 had a fine time yesterday afternoon, preparatory to closing the present school year. The giving out of certificates, speeches and some capital singing, under the direction of Mr. BRIZNOR, made up the stock of good things offered for the gratification of the crush of visitors.

NO. 49—TWENTY-FIRST WARD.

The pupils of the various departments of this fine school assembled together in the Primary Department and held their first annual review and reception in the afternoon yesterday. The singing, under the direction of Mr. WOOD, was first-rate, and the occasion was one to be proud of.

NO. 12—SEVENTH WARD.

Mr. FARRINGTON's school, No. 12, held a closing jubilee at the church on the corner of Madison and Gouverneur streets, yesterday morning, which was attended by a host of lady visitors. Certificates were given out, and there were pertinent speeches and good music.

Railroad Indicators.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I heard a blunt-spoken passenger exclaim to a car full of passengers, "look out for your pockets, Gentlemen," and afterwards he explained himself by saying, that as the proprietors of the Road had no confidence in the conductors, he did not know why the passengers should have. It was the best commentary on the mean contrivance called the Indicator that could be furnished; and as the men employed on the Road are as competent and honorable as any others engaged in making a living by their daily toil, I hope soon to find that the nonsensical Indicators are dispensed with. G. W. R.

Fancy Privileges.

When coal was selling at $7 50 the ton, the Union Ferry Company put up the price of foreign fifty per cent, only focused coal was so exceptionally high. Now coal sells at $5. Why don't the Union Ferry Company deduct fifty per cent from their fares? An early answer is solicited.

☞ Why don't some enterprising Railroad Company fit up a car with cushions to attend the train—a regular dining car, where, at certain hours, or at all hours, the traveler could sit down to a quiet, comfortable meal, and "take it easy," by paying for it? The hot coffee and matched pies and sandwiches swallowed, with railroad speed, at the refreshment depôts, burn our mouths, ruin our digestion, and perpetually stick us with short change! Who will initiate a better state of things?

☞ The new hall for the BUCKLEYS, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel, already presents a handsome frontage front on Broadway, and will soon be ready to receive its population.

☞ A Fire Engine Company is petitioning the Common Council for a portion of the little park at the junction of Bond-street and West Broadway, to put a new engine house on. It is a bad move.

☞ The bark Willielmina will be launched from the Westervelt ship-yard, foot of Houston-street, E. R., on Thursday, at 5 P. M.

Repairing the Streets.

The Street Committee of the Councilmen began yesterday, a tour of inspection through the streets of the City, opportunities for the repaving of which are in their hands. Applications have been sent to the Common Council asking the repaving of nearly one-third of the streets of the City. The Committee yesterday looked through Rutgers, Amity and Jackson streets, and found them all replete with "Micos Alle and Alee." They had a chance to talk the matter as they rode in carriages.

Assault upon a Captain.

JOHN BENSON, a sailor belonging to the crew of the Hunter, just arrived here, [illegible] was arrested yesterday, by Deputy [illegible], charged with having, during the voyage, made a dangerous assault upon a [illegible] Captain HALLEY of the [illegible]. He was fully committed for trial. The case will be examined to-day, before U. S. Commissioner [illegible].

MR. PEABODY'S ANNUAL DINNER.

Annual Festival, &c.

On Friday, the 4th inst., a sumptuous dinner was given by Mr. PEABODY, at the Star and Garter, Richmond, to upwards of one hundred American and a few English gentlemen, in commemoration of the eighth Anniversary of the Declaration of the Independence of the United States. The grand dining hall was fitted up for the occasion with busts of the Queen and of WASHINGTON, the American eagle, standards of England and of the United States, and other appropriate decorations. Mr. PEABODY occupied the Chair shortly after 7 o'clock, supported on his right by the American Minister, Mr. DALLAS, and on the left by Mr. W. BROWN, M. P., Mr. STEELE of Manchester; Mr. MONGAN, of London; Mr. SOUMMER, of Boston, United States; Mr. F. N. DALLAS, Secretary of Legation, and Mr. CROSKEY, United States Consul at Southampton, acted as Vice-Presidents. Sir JOHN MACDONALD, M. P., Mr. S. C. HALL and Mr. B. JONES, the sculptor, were among the English guests.

After the removal of the cloth,

Mr. PEABODY rose and said: Your Excellency and gentlemen, I am now about to pass, in the common acceptation of the phrase, "the loving cup." But I have before me two cups, the one of British fabric, the other of my native oak, presented to me many years since by my esteemed friend Mr. FRANCIS PARKMAN, who is now present. Before passing these cups, allow me to say a word or two with respect to the day in connection with myself. The first dinner I gave in commemoration of the 4th of July, 1776, was in this hall in 1850, and I was then, as now, honored by the presence of the American Minister, a large party of my own countrymen, and of many English friends, some of whom it is my happiness to see around me to-day. That experiment proved successful, and in 1851, in consequence of the large number of my countrymen who came over to visit the Great Exhibition, I determined on substituting for the dinner a concert and ball. A few of my countrymen endeavored to dissuade me from the attempt to bring Englishmen and Americans together at such an occasion; but the acceptance of the Duke of WELLINGTON put an end to my doubts, and a thousand happy faces, at Almack's, on the 4th of July, 1851, sealed my success. [Cheers.] and, I trust, broke down the assumed barrier to the union of Englishmen and Americans in celebrating this glorious anniversary, never again to be erected. [Cheers.] But to return, gentlemen, to the cups; these cups of love and peace, the one of British fabric, the other of our American oak, filled from the same fountain of good cheer, I send across the East and the other to the West, and where they meet in the circling bound may they pass with the touch of friendship. [Cheers.]

The two cups were then passed round, Mr. PEABODY drinking to the guests from each State of the Union separately, and afterwards to those from Old England and her Colonies."

Mr. PEABODY, after proposing the first toast, "The day we celebrate," called upon all who were friends to the sacred cause of liberty and civilization, to do honor to the memories of those great men who had pledged their fortunes, their honor, and their lives to support that cause; which was received with loud acclamations.

Mr. PEABODY claimed a bumper for the next toast, which, he was sure, needed no speech from him to recommend it. The toast he had just proposed was the only one to which he would have given precedence over the present. He had never yet known an American who would not drink the toast of "Her Majesty, the Queen," with as much enthusiasm as the most loyal of her subjects.

The toast was drunk with enthusiastic cheering.

Mr. PEABODY said he should next have the pleasure of proposing a toast in honor of the chief magistrate of the land of his birth—"The President of the United States," which was received with great applause.

Captain MACKINNON, R. N., in proposing the next toast, thanked their host, the merchant prince who had entertained them in so princely a manner, for the efforts he had made to cultivate relations of friendship between John Bull and Brother Jonathan. [Cheers.] In the course of three years a country as large as England had been occupied and cultivated. Captain MACKINNON concluded by proposing "The Memory of WASHINGTON," which was drunk standing and in silence.

Mr. W. BROWN, M. P., said—Before proposing the toast which has been placed in my hands, permit me to congratulate you on meeting you to celebrate a day which will ever be remembered in the history of the world—a day from which we, the subjects of her Majesty, have derived as much advantage as you, the citizens of the United States. [Cheers.] We are not answerable for the sins of statesmanship, for the grievous errors of our forefathers; and your illustrious WASHINGTON—wise in the senate, skillful in the field—who must ever live in your hearts, is also remembered with profound respect by England as well as by the whole of the civilized world. [Cheers.] How rejoiced would he be, were he living at this moment, to see the prosperity of the country which he may be said to have brought into existence, to see the enterprising spirit of his countrymen leading them, now, to make a communication between two great oceans—the Pacific and the Atlantic—now to bridge over lofty rocks, and now to explore the perilous Arctic seas. [Cheers.] I deny that England feels any jealousy towards the United States; we rejoice in your prosperity, we have wisdom enough to know that by the prosperity of other nations, particularly as regards the United States, we are as much benefited as they are. [Cheers.] The notion that the fortunes of one country arise from the misfortune of another is I trust by this time exploded. True, some slight differences exist now between us; but when we find gentlemen like His Excellency, for whom we all feel the deepest respect, and the Minister with whom he has to negotiate, anxious to get rid of those differences, there can be little doubt that they will soon be amicably adjusted. [Cheers.] I beg to propose "the health of His Excellency the American Minister," whose character stands so preeminently high both in his own and in this country.

The toast was drunk with loud cheers.

Mr. DALLAS—It is extremely difficult, amid expressions of so much personal kindness, not to lose sight for a moment of the great national demonstration on account of which we are assembled, and I return you my most hearty thanks for the personal compliment you have paid me. I rejoice to find in this land so many ardent and patriotic Americans meet to celebrate the anniversary of our independence. [Loud cheers.] We are, as a country, but eighty years of age; we are at this moment honored by the presence of one of the leading men of America, who is only one year younger than his own country—Gen. MARCY. [Cheers.] but, notwithstanding the youth of our country, how justly proud may we be of her! [Cheers.] At the time of her birth she was a puny creature, sickly, feeble, diminutive. Look at her now. She then contained but 2,500,000. Her population is now 27,000,000. Her territory was then a margin of the Atlantic. It is now an immense continent. Her wealth was then comparative poverty. Her resources are now actually extraordinary. [Cheers.] Her moral greatness, too, bears a fair proportion to her physical development. There is in her physical configuration, everything to delight the eye and exalt the imagination; she has the noblest mountains, the most extended lakes, the widest rivers, the richest prairies. And in harmony with this is the progress of her genius and of her moral principles, and the great elevation of her political maxims. [Cheers.] When Americans look back at the short period during which their country has emerged upon the theatre of the world, they have, therefore, some reason to be proud.—[Cheers.]—nay, I go further, this great country, whence sprang the chief stock of the United States, has reason to be proud. [Cheers.] In all our great characteristics we are first and, perhaps, in some respects, we exceed them in having practically expurgated from our religious liberty. [Cheers.] But, gentlemen, I think it is not, gentlemen, [illegible] to carry the spirit of this occasion, and unite, [illegible] the success of each other, we will never [illegible] be brought to a point of honor, and, therefore, they sometimes come into collision. Two symbols, [illegible] the same course of [illegible] will sometimes find their interests clash. The spirit of the age, now which in free countries should ever be free, often brings on a state of feeling which requires to be dealt with by the wisest and most conciliatory measures. [Loud cheers.] It is a matter of sincere regret, but perhaps it is the order of Providence, that the freest nations are not always the sincerest friends. [Hear, hear.] Essentially concurred in the first, second, and third toasts that were proposed. With regard to the second, permit me to observe that, if there is one feature of the American character more prominent than another it is the heartiness with which they receive the toast of the lady whose name is always foremost in the hearts of Englishmen. [Loud cheers.] I ask my countrymen who are acquainted with the universal spirit of America, who know the extent to which we carry our civilization, whether we do not always drink a double bumper to the ladies in preference to the gentlemen? [Cheers and laughter.] As to the present toast, gentlemen, I thank you for the manner in which you have received it, its only merit being that it comes from William Brown, of Liverpool. [Loud cheers.]

General CROWNINSHIELD said: I am really glad, Mr. Chairman, of the opportunity of meeting my distinguished fellow-countrymen, whom you have invited in a quiet way to celebrate the Fourth of July. The American people at large are a helpful, instructed people, and believe that the pen is stronger than the sword. [Cheers.] Naturally left to themselves, they prize the comforts of peace, and if ever a difficulty should arise with any nation it will probably find its origin in a national characteristic. Sir, shall we say that we belong to the genus irritabile? [Hear, hear," and a laugh.] We are a particularly sensitive race, and we need not (nor should we) disguise the fact that difficulty may arise from some unwise, untruthful, unchristian-like irritation. In all kindness be it spoken, the example is before us; I believe the public press in England can hold in its hand the key to the American heart. [Cheers.] My countrymen are naturally disposed to respect themselves, and feel kindly disposed towards England. Be assured sir, the American daughter is of herself willing to bare her breast to nurture and sustain her venerable parent. [Cheers.] I am confident, if her Majesty the Queen or her royal consort (for the Queen is a lady and the American people are a gallant people) should visit the United States, that the royal progress would be everywhere hailed with as much respect and as much enthusiasm as would be shown by her own loyal subjects. [Cheers.] There is, in the United states, a large Conservative class who are entirely removed from the arena of politics; and I can say that these good people think that the public press in America and the public press in England can well afford to consult the national peculiarities of each other. [Here, sir, to propose the toast I have in my hand.—"Great Britain and the United States; frank, sincere, cordial friendship, and a permanent peace between them." [Drunk with immense cheering.]

Mr. JOHN MCGEHEGAN, M. P., as the representative of a great constituency which had considerable intercourse with America, proposed the health of his friend Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, who was a most active promoter of that amity which ought always to exist between the two nations speaking the same language and descended from common ancestors.

The toast was received with loud and prolonged cheers.

Mr. PEABODY, in returning thanks for the very kind reception given to the toast, said that he was exceedingly gratified at being surrounded on that glorious day by so large a number of his countrymen and his English friends; that he was most happy to witness the perfect harmony which had prevailed throughout the proceedings of the evening; and he trusted that it would be so, and that life might be spared to meet his friends on many similar occasions. [Cheers.] He had no difficulty in providing for their physical appetites, but they must look to those more capable of making speeches than himself to cater for their intellectual requirements. He felt his heart was right, but he wanted the power to express in suitable language its feelings. During his long absence from his native country he had formed many attachments; but the land of his birth was always uppermost in his affections, and he would ever rejoice to call it his home. Again thanking them for their kindness, he sat down amid renewed applause, the band playing "Home, sweet home."

Mr. CORBIN, with a few appropriate remarks, then gave "Our English guests," which was drunk with all the honors, Mr. S. C. HALL responding.

The next toast, "Professor MORSE," whose name was associated with the wonderful improvements in electric telegraph, having been responded to,

Mr. CROSKEY, in returning thanks, observed that he was happy, as a citizen of Great Britain in the New World, to tell them how proud the Countrymen of Old England felt of their sire and their sovereign—feelings which arose from the kind and fostering hand which England extended to them in the management of their own affairs. [Cheers.] To the old colonies she had acted the part of a harsh stepmother; she had coerced and chained her children down until the iron had entered into their souls, and in their anger and despair they had broken the fetters that galled them and sought a clime that bound them. To the new colonies she had been a gentle and nursing mother, assisting them to develop their resources, directing their energies, aiding their enterprises, and conferring upon them the inestimable boon of self-government. [Cheers.] And mark what had been the results; with nearly a million of people more than the old colonies possessed at the time of the Revolution, their attachment to England was steadfast and strong; and, while the Americans always spoke, when about to visit the Old World, of "going out to Europe," it was still with the colonists, when they crossed the seas, "coming home to England." [Cheers.] War had been spoken of between these islands and the Continent of the West, and none could think of such a calamity without a shudder; but men must not shut their eyes to the possibility of such an event, and considerations of humanity and religion must be invoked, and concessions made, to avert the catastrophe. [Cheers.] England could afford to concede, and the world would be spared the spectacle of the two great Protestant nations of the earth working against each other, and wasting on the battle-field those precious lives that in peace might extend religion and civilization to the ends of the earth. [Cheers.]

The concluding toast of "The Ladies" having been given by Mr. PEABODY, the company separated shortly before 12 o'clock, all of them highly gratified with their evening's entertainment.

The national airs of the two countries were played at intervals during the evening by a very efficient band.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Return of the Guards—Public Reception.

After an absence of two years and a half "the Guards"—the particular garrison of London—made their entry into the Metropolis, on Wednesday the 9th. A public reception was given them by the Queen and Londoners, in imitation of the reception of the Imperial Guard by NAPOLEON and the Parisians.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Yesterday morning the whole of the Crimean regiments in camp at Aldershott were under arms at an early hour, and marched direct to the review ground on Aldershott Common, where the main body—all the troops were drawn up in line, under the command of Lieutenant-General [illegible] the Duke of Cambridge, in the front of the line the colors of each regiment [illegible]

[illegible] addressed them in the following terms:

"Officers, Non-commissioned Officers, and Soldiers—I wish personally to convey, through you, to the regiments assembled here this day, my hearty welcome on your return to England in health and full efficiency. Say to them that I have watched anxiously over the difficulties and hardships which they have so nobly borne; that I have mourned with deep sorrow for the brave men who have fallen for their country; and that I have felt proud of that valor which with their gallant allies, they have displayed on every field. I thank God that your dangers are over, whilst the glory of your deeds remains. But I know that, should your services be again required, you will be animated with the same devotion which in the Crimea has rendered you invincible."

The Queen spoke from an open carriage. She was in a riding habit, and wore a round hat.

Prince ALBERT, the King of the Belgians, the Prince of Wales, Prince OSCAR, the Duke of CAMBRIDGE and Lord PANMURE, were on horseback by the royal carriage.

Her Majesty spoke with a clearness of enunciation which rendered her words distinctly audible throughout the whole square. At the close of her address, the Queen bowed graciously to the several corps, and at the call of General KNOLLYS the officers and men acknowledged the distinguished compliment paid to them by three rounds of hearty cheers.

A festival under the auspices of the association for promoting a reduction of the wine duties, was held in the Sydenham Crystal Palace, on the 9th. Three hundred sat down to dinner under the presidency of Mr. OLIVIERA, M. P.

The Earl of Carlisle, Viceroy of Ireland, is visiting America.

The Prince and Princess of Prussia are on a visit to the British Court.

Lord STANLEY, Earl of Shaftesbury, Bishops of Bath and of Mann, Mr. MONCKTON MILNES, and other notables, spoke at a meeting in London, on the 10th, in favor of the early closing of stores, and in favor of giving the working classes [illegible]

Matters in Parliament.

There has been nothing of much importance in Parliament. Lord CAMPBELL called the attention of the Lords to the indiscriminate sale of poison, and hoped the Government would introduce some measure on the subject.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL's motion respecting Italian affairs is fixed for Monday next.

There has been no reference to American affairs, excepting some interrogatories as to the boundaries of the Belize.

Col. DUNNE asked whether other persons than Austrians might navigate the Danube above the frontiers of Austria, on equal terms, in accordance with the treaty of Paris. Lord PALMERSTON replied that by the treaty of Paris the navigation of the Danube was to be rendered liable to the stipulations of the treaty of 1815. By that treaty such rivers as divided or traversed different States were free to the navigation by vessels of all nations.

Mutiny of the Tipperary Militia—Action with the Regulars—Loss of Life.

A serious riot occurred at Nenagh, Ireland, on the 6th July, and succeeding days. The cause of the revolt was, in substance, that the Government, when the militia was embodied, promised to each man a considerable bounty, but having now no further need of the men, refused to pay the balance, and ordered them to be disbanded. An order was issued to take up the new clothing, which was distributed to the men in April last. One man refused to give up his clothes, and was sent to the guard-house, whereupon his comrades broke it open and liberated him. They then threw off all discipline, broke open the magazine, supplied themselves with the small quantity of ammunition they found therein, and refused to give up their arms until all arrears were paid.

The militia then paraded the town, preceded by their band, and discharging their muskets in the air. Their officers do not seem to have acted with any energy to quell the riot. Assistance was telegraphed for, and in a short time one thousand of the line, of the 18th, 41st, 47th and 55th regiments arrived under the command of Col. HART, who marched to the Summerhill barrack, and, surrounding it, succeeded in disarming the insurgents within. Other parties of the militiamen were, however, outside the barrack walls, and made several attempts to fire through the gate upon the regulars. They did shoot one man—a Crimean veteran—dead, through the key-hole of the gate, and wounded another. The troops having disarmed the rioters in the Summerhill barrack, marched towards Pound-street barracks. In Castle-street they met a body of the insurgents who fired a volley, which was replied to with effect by the troops. A good deal of skirmishing ensued.

At length the ammunition of the rioters ran out, and they were disarmed and made prisoners. The ringleaders will be tried by the civil power. Only four persons were killed and about a dozen wounded. Had not the military shown such forbearance the number of casualties must have been much greater. The citizens sided with the militia, and cheered them on. The names of the dead were PERRIE ROCHFORT and PATRICK TEACHY, militiamen, PATRICK CURLEY, 41st regiment, and PETER GIBBONS, pensioner. At latest telegraphic accounts from Nenagh the town was quiet, but considerable apprehension prevailed as to the likelihood of a renewal on the morning following. The subjoined account of Tuesday's and Wednesday's proceedings is taken from the Nenagh Guardian of Wednesday:

"Yesterday morning the Militia stopped the Limerick coach, and searched it, imagining it might be conveying away ammunition, but, not discovering any, they allowed it to proceed on its journey. We learn that they have been running bullets the greater part of the day. They carry their arms with them through the streets, and fire them at pleasure. At half-past one o'clock all the men from Pound-street passed up to the Summerhill barracks, armed. Lord DUNALLEY, Mr. R. GABON, and some other magistrates and gentlemen followed them, and endeavored to pacify them. They succeeded so far as to prevail on the men to unfix their bayonets. The Militia afterwards paraded the town, headed by their band, discharging an indiscriminate and irregular fire into the air. The shops were all closed, business was suspended, and the town had all the appearance of a besieged place.

At about 4 o'clock the military, consisting of 1,000 soldiers of the 18th, 41st, 47th, and 55th depôts, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel HART, entered Barrack-street from Templemore, and were halted opposite the church. Here they received instructions to fix bayonets and load with ball cartridge, to march on the barrack of Nenagh, and take possession of it. They then proceeded, headed by Mr. JOHN FLEMING, resident Magistrate, to Summerhill Barrack, each man as cool as if he were going to a review. On reaching the barrack gate the Colonel demanded admittance. There was no reply—it was a moment of dread suspense! He placed his hand on the gate and it opened to his touch. He advanced, followed by his men, who opened into double file and surrounded the barrack walls. Fortunately, not a shot was fired at the military. Some were here, however, only a small portion of the Militia, from whom Lieutenant-Colonel MAYNE and the other Tipperary Officers, ably seconded by Lord DUNALLEY, succeeded, after some difficulty, in getting quiet possession of their arms.

While the disarming was going on a considerable number of the Militia from the Pound-street barracks were prowling outside about the gate with their arms loaded. They made several attempts to fire in at the Line, and unfortunately succeeded in shooting two soldiers belonging to the 47th and shot through the keyhole of the gate. One of the men was mortally wounded, and he died shortly after. The other man's wounds are not of a very serious nature.

An officer's party was then sent out to clear the streets of the Militia. On arriving near the market-cross they were fired at by some of the latter, who had concealed themselves behind the corners of the streets. The officer got his men into skirmishing order and succeeded in dislodging the Militia from their position, and drove them into Pound-street barracks. Having effected their object, the party returned without any casualty, fortunately, either.

Shortly after 5 o'clock 200 men of the 21st arrived from Parsonstown. Having joined the Templemore troops, the entire body, under the command of Major-General CHATTERTON, K. H., who, accompanied by his Aide-de-Camp, Major FOSTER, and Colonel MILLER, Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant General, had just arrived from Limerick, proceeded to take possession of the Pound-street Barracks, where the militia seemed resolved to make a determined stand and fight it out with the regulars. Before the column proceeded far down Castle-street they were received with a tremendous volley from a body of militia who had again stationed themselves at the market cross. The front rank of the line returned the fire, which was responded to by another discharge from the militia. A continuous roll of musketry was then kept up for about five minutes, and the result must have been awful, only that the men, not wishing to take away life, there being many persons in the streets at the time, fired into the air. While this was going on in the street a strong party of the military were dispatched up by the new Court-house. Here they fell in with a body of the Militia, who took to the fields and formed themselves into skirmishing order, displaying the utmost coolness and determination—it may be added bravery—in their encounter with the Line. They were, however, soon overcome, and had to beat a hasty retreat. The military then proceeded round Oadville to the Pound-street Barracks, where they met the street party, who had compelled the Militia at the market-cross, after some sharp firing, to retire also. After a feeble resistance, the insurrection having run out, the latter were compelled to submit, and, having given up their arms, were made prisoners, and marched up to the military prison, where they were lodged for the night. Thus ended one of the most fearful days ever spent in Nenagh. But we regret to say that this last engagement was attended with serious loss of life and personal injury. Three of the soldiers were wounded; one of them had his thigh broken; a pensioner, named GIBBONS, residing in Pound-street, was shot dead while looking out of his house; and two children were more or less injured.

The cause of this outrageous conduct is quite simple. On the embodiment of the Irish Militia the officers were promised a certain bounty, but now they violate that engagement.

Accounts from the Irish Journals.

The Irish journals bring full details up to a late hour on Wednesday night, at which time the town of Nenagh was quiet, but considerable apprehension prevailed as to the likelihood of a renewal on the morning following. The subjoined account of Tuesday's and Wednesday's proceedings is taken from the Nenagh Guardian of Wednesday:

[illegible] military barrack for the purpose of [illegible] the bodies of the persons killed in the previous evening. The following are the names: [illegible] Thomas Tipperary Militia, [illegible] Grenadier Guards, Patrick Curley, the soldier of the 41st, had only recently returned from the seat of war, having been at the battles of Alma, Inkermann, and Balaclava. He had three medals for his services on these memorable occasions. He was a fine-looking young fellow, about 30 years of age, and has left a widow and three young children. The two Militiamen were each about 20 years old, and not married.

A corporal of the 41st identified the body of Curley.

Lord Dunalley was the first witness examined by the Coroner: I was in the military barracks here yesterday; I attended as a magistrate in consequence of a mutiny among the Tipperary Regiment of Militia, and offered my assistance in restoring order among them; with regard to the death of the soldier, Curley, I saw the occurrence take place; I saw a man dressed in red come up to the small door of the barrack entrance and discharge his firelock; the man that fired was within a few yards of the deceased at the time; the deceased was only in the act of entering the gate when he was shot; the man then fell; the soldiers passed round him, and the perpetrator disappeared; that is all I know about the matter; was the person who fired the shot, I cannot say.

Henry Fraser, examined—I live in Nenagh; I was standing outside the wicket-gate yesterday and saw a Militiaman fire a shot in through it; when the shot was fired I heard the soldier was killed; the man who fired ran away; I also ran away; I should not know the man who fired the shot; when it was said the man was shot the Militiamen and people ran away.

After some further evidence,

The jury returned a verdict "That the deceased men came by their deaths in consequence of gun-shot wounds inflicted by some person or persons unknown; and that the death of the soldier Curley, of the 41st Regiment, was caused by a soldier of the North Tipperary Militia."

The Case of Sadleir.

From the London Times, July 11.

DUBLIN, Thursday morning.

As might be surmised, the observations made by the Irish Attorney-General in the House of Commons, on Monday, have elicited a rejoinder from the Master of the Rolls, and from the remarks which fell from the latter high functionary it would appear that the case of James SADLEIR is likely to be a further and more serious misunderstanding between the two parties at issue. At the sitting of the Court, yesterday morning, the Master of the Rolls said:

"That he considered it necessary, in vindication of himself, to notice some observations lately made and reiterated by the Attorney-General in his place in the House of Commons relative to Mr. JAMES SADLEIR; and for that purpose he would forward to London a statement of facts by that night's post. That statement he would make public at the sitting of the Court on Friday. He (the Master of the Rolls) could not allow the allegations put forward to go uncontradicted. No amount of mystification should or could now get rid of the matter, owing to the character it had assumed, as he (the Master of the Rolls) would show, beyond all doubt, for he would not state a single fact which he would not be prepared to prove. The charge made by the Attorney-General was of a most serious nature, involving character, and he was determined that no amount of sophistry or mystification should get rid of it. Upon Friday he would state the facts at length at the sitting of the Court."

The statement referred to has, it is believed, been forwarded to the Right Hon. JOSEPH NAPIER.

PARIS, Monday, July 7, 1856.

THE PROFANITIES OF M. GEOFFROY ST. HILAIRE.

One day M. ISIDORE GEOFFROY SAINT HILAIRE, son of his illustrious father, commenced his lecture at the Sorbonne with the now famous words: "Man and all other monkeys"—a burst of physiological profanity which the aristocratic Faubourg St. Germain has not forgiven the learned Professor to this day, although that was ten years ago. A friend, who is one of the attendants on the Professor's Course, at this moment, has favored me with some notes on the sigular doctrines of the great lecturer, "on the place which man occupies in the animal series." Some of the lecturer's conclusions are startling. Thus he proves that—and I must quote his own language—"the nasal projection exists only in man and another monkey, of the long-nosed tribe!" Still incorrigible after the terrible lesson which his first contade gained him, M. ST. HILAIRE persists, as you will observe, in his dreadful formula—"man and another monkey!" On this text the learned Professor had full scope to develop his sympathy for the monkey tribe—including man! His reasoning is founded on analogues susceptible of ready demonstration. Thus man resembles the troglodytes and the gorilles by the form of the nails; like him, these animals have the back of the nails entirely flat, while all other monkeys have them gutter-shaped. It is a mistake to say that this last character belongs to all monkeys, and that that is one of the differences which all monkeys bear to man. Again, there are eight wrist bones in the troglodytes and the gorilles, the same as in man. He finds that the ear of the troglodytes, the gorilles, and the ourang-outangs, present very nearly the same details of structure as that of man. The length of the sternum, of the scapular and iliac bones, as well as the predominance of the transverse diameter of the chest over the antero-posterior diameter, is a character common to man and to monkeys of the first tribe. In this strain of reasoning, and with many points of equally striking force, but most of which could not be reproduced here, one is drawn towards the startling conclusion of the Professor with an irresistible curiosity to see the end of the strange analogy.

M. SAINT-HILAIRE proposes to pursue this parallel study of man and monkey; but so sure is he of his conclusion, that he never fails to use the terrible formula—"man and other monkeys!" He announces that while on this subject, he intends to direct his attention to the tailed men of Africa, known under the designation of Niam-Niams; and we may expect to find ourselves, at the end of the learned professor's course, full brothers to the Niam-Niam, the ourang-outang and the ape, and cousins-german to the ring-tailed monkey, and its kindred of the macauco tribe! The proposition is more scientific than amusing!

Without wishing to tarnish the lustre of the learned professor's prestige, or to weaken his arguments by the introduction of a foreign question, it yet ought to be known that it is to M. GEOFFROY ST. HILAIRE that the public owe the agitation on the introduction of horse-flesh as an article of food. M. ST. HILAIRE does not only advocate the propriety of eating horse-soup, horse-steak and corned horse, but he carries his doctrine into practice; and in this fact, perhaps, lies the secret of the singular quadrumanomania which afflicts him.

POWERS' "AMERICA."

A member of Congress recently moved an inquiry in regard to a contract which Mr. POWERS is executing at Florence for the Capitol at Washington. This inquiry refers, undoubtedly, to the statue of America, and I propose to give you some details on the subject which [illegible]

A cast of [illegible] years ago [illegible] hands of Mr. POWERS, representing a national subject, to be placed in the Capitol at Washington. President PIERCE, informed, no doubt, of the fact which I am going to give you, lately refused, and certainly very justly, to pay so unprecedented a sum for the work now in course of completion. Here are the facts:

Some years ago Mr. POWERS commenced the work he calls "America." It is simply a female figure, and is copied from the celebrated Venus of Medicis, the most perfect model of its kind extant. For many years the work was intended, for the [illegible]

The two Militiamen were each about 20 years old, and not married.

THE PROFANITIES OF M. GEO

to Paris [illegible] Political Measures.

The Emperor continues at Plombieres, where he uses the baths, and passes his time mostly in outdoor exercise.

The Monitor contains an official contradiction of the report that the Emperor NAPOLEON proposes meeting the Emperor of Austria on the lake of Constance.

A paragraph in the Indépendance Belge denies the authenticity of the letter attributed to the Count DE PARIS on the subject of the Orleans factions, but the correspondents of London papers reaffirm it.

Several persons are already named as candidates for the office of Minister of Public Instruction, in room of the late M. FORTOUL. Of these, MM. CHEVREULEUR, DUMAS, PARIEU and LA GUERONNIÈRE are mentioned, all of whom, with the exception of the last, have already been in the Cabinet.

A French soldier has been killed in a brawl at Glargoen. It appears that the soldier omitted to salute an Austrian officer, whereupon the officer proceeded to cane him, and some Austrian soldiers coming up, a row ensued, and the Frenchman was killed. The Paris Monitor announces that full justice will be dealt upon the offender, and, meantime, the Austrian Government pensions the family of the deceased.

Gen. MARTIMPREY is the officer who remains in the Crimea, charged with the Consular functions, until such time as a regular Consul is appointed.

THE CRIMEA.

The Evacuation.

The Paris Monitor publishes the following dispatch from Admiral TROCHU, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean squadron:

On board the Bayonnaise, July 6.

Yesterday, July 5, the definitive evacuation of the Crimea took place. Marshal PELISSIER embarked on board the Inkerman, which immediately got under way. The Bayonnaise, which has just anchored at Balaclava, left Kamiesch with the last vessels that were there, and which are expected to arrive to-morrow in the Bosphorus.

TURKEY.

Peace Building.

ALI PACHA arrived at Constantinople June 28, from Paris.

A company has been formed, with Messrs. CUNARD and McIVER at its head, for the construction of a dock, with patent slips, on the Bosphorus. Mr. FAWCETT, engineer of the Heraclea coal mines, was commissioned to find a suitable site, and has selected Beicos Bay, as being easily accessible and well sheltered from every wind. As the company ask for no exclusive privilege, there will be no difficulty in obtaining permission from the Porte.

STATE OF ITALY.

Great Numbers of Political Prisoners in Naples.

From the London Times.

NAPLES, Thursday, July 3, 1856.

In a former letter I mentioned that a political prisoner confined in Manfredonia was ill with a mortal malady, and yet in a short time I recorded my statement was true beyond the possibility of refutation. I have now to add fresh particulars of the unfortunate ALESSIO EMILI. On the 25th of last month, in almost a dying state, he was taken from the prison, and transferred to the hospital at Capua. His death had been taken off a few days only before his departure. Of the weak state to which this victim of political vengeance had been reduced you may form some idea from the following facts:—He was so ill that he could not bear the movement of a carriage, and was taken, therefore, to Canobello in a portantina, and was accompanied by the physician, and, I believe, the chaplain. The mercy which he had hoped to find in his native country is this—that after his body had been consumed by persecution in chains and damp prisons for many years, every preparation was made for the decent appearance of his soul in the presence of Him who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords. It is an edifying instance of the high religious feeling of the Government, and it is to be hoped will reconcile to their fate those who are now suffering or who are yet to suffer.

As to the appearance of EMILI, I am informed that he was reduced to a shadow, without an ounce of flesh upon his bones, and, thus spiritualized, he at length taken out of prison, with a priest at hand, ready to escort him on entrance into Paradise. At Capua, his friends await his arrival to close his eyes. Passports have been hitherto refused to his relatives, but, as much interest is being used to get one for his brother, it is to be hoped that he will come in for the closing scene. I must, in justice, say that everything necessary had been prepared for his journey, and that by the local authorities he was treated with the utmost attention. Sympathy, though dangerous to those who show it too much, is one of those sentiments which the Governments of the Two Sicilies has not as yet been able to suppress.

I have called more particular attention to the case of EMILI as being one in which the details have been brought more clearly before my eyes. The wonder is that so many are preserved alive—the more so when it is remembered that out of 500 political prisoners immured in the Bagno di Procida for political offences since 1848, 50 have died. This, and the political trials, are pleasing facts, and very pregnant with meaning at the present crisis. They show how great are the encomiums which may be safely pronounced by the Government, and how great is its disposition to yield to the "friendly representations" of other Governments. They have asked for bread and received a serpent. A German wondered that the years did not teach Italians to each other's faces. We who know Naples wonder that statesmen do not laugh when speaking of friendly representations, and of their hopes that they will be listened to. Is it the first time that such representations have been made? Are not the archives of the British Legation full of such futile remonstrances? It is an insult and an injury to Italy, in the face of a host of facts, to confine ourselves to simple remonstrances, the only probable result of which will be to irritate the petty despots of this country and to stabilize yet more the position of their subjects. Once having decided on the principle, which Lord CLARENDON appeared to have done when he spoke of "exceptional cases," and something more than remonstrance became necessary. That something more need not be much. I now send you in conclusion an address from the Neapolitans to Count CAVOUR. It is important as showing the increased influence which Piedmont has gained by recent events, and the greater approximation which is being effected between the Italian Nationalities:

THE NEAPOLITANS TO COUNT CAVOUR.

"The Parliament and the army of Piedmont have made manifest to the world that civil prudence and military valor are the patrimony of Italians, a patrimony which falls not beneath the scythe of time nor with the vicissitudes of history. This wisdom and this courage no longer suffered delay, you have known how to engage in the great affairs of nations and in the struggle of giants in the Crimea. Those deeds now bear upon them the impress of the Italian name, and your name will never be blotted from the pages of human greatness. Those who once regarded your counsels as rashness now applaud you with astonishment. They have been enabled to perceive that privileged minds pierce deeply into passing events; that happy results are almost always the effect of wise preparations, and that, [illegible] Italy; you afterwards undertook to [illegible] the nations a third glorious [illegible] for it a more robust existence [illegible] wonderful civilization; and now, we [illegible] the other Italian provinces, the [illegible] have been to live, it may be [illegible] Italian cradle, Piedmont. This is [illegible] tremble with indignation at the unmerited [illegible] to be condemned. Praise be to your [illegible] were the testimonials which you brought [illegible] for Italy; you afterwards undertook to [illegible] the nations a third glorious [illegible] for it a more robust existence [illegible] wonderful civilization; and now, we [illegible] the other Italian provinces, the [illegible] have been to live, it may be [illegible] Italian cradle, Piedmont. LIVERPOOL, Friday, July 11, 1856.

Farmers' deliveries of WHEAT for the week ending last Saturday were 21,612 quarters, at 74s. 7d., against 28,130 quarters, at 76s. 1d., in the corresponding week of last year. The weather since our last has been unsettled, and occasionally stormy, and, in consequence, there has been more activity in the GRAIN trade. On Tuesday, WHEAT was in good consumptive inquiry, and some qualities sold at an advance of 2d.@3d. Other kinds, however, brought full prices; and a fair business was done in all descriptions. FLOUR was also in good request at the full rates of Friday. INDIAN CORN held for an advance of 1s. ℘ quarter, but little doing.

MESSRS. BROOKS AND BURLINGAME.

Mr. Brooks' Statement of the Case.

TO THE PUBLIC.

It is with extreme reluctance that I am constrained to transfer a private quarrel from its legitimate field into the public press. The fault, however, does not properly rest with me, as an impartial public will decide after reading the following card from ANSON BURLINGAME, member of Congress from Massachusetts:

A CARD.—I am informed that the memorandum of a recent conversation of myself and friends with the friends of Mr. BROOKS, has received, in some quarters, from its position, as appended to Mr. BROOKS' speech, an interpretation which does injustice to its real meaning and to my intentions.

This is what I say, and have said, in relation to my speech:—That I observed in it the rules of personal and parliamentary decorum; that I could not qualify or retract any portion of it, and held myself responsible to any gentleman aggrieved by it.

This is the only construction which I supposed would be placed on the memorandum, which my friends reduced to writing, that there might be no misunderstanding. But, inasmuch as attempts, not altogether unsuccessful, have been made to pervert its true meaning, I now withdraw it.

There may not be any misapprehension in the future, I say explicitly, that I leave my speech to interpret itself, and hold myself responsible for it without qualification or amendment.

A. BURLINGAME.

WASHINGTON, July 19, 1856.

This card was drat published in the Intelligencer on Monday, the 21st inst., though it is dated July 19.

As soon as I could procure a friend—which was in less than two hours after I first saw the card—the following message was sent to Mr. BURLINGAME:

WASHINGTON, July 21, 1856.

SIR: Will you do me the kindness to indicate some place, outside of this District, where it will be convenient to you to negotiate in reference to the differences between us. Very respectfully, &c.,

HON. A. BURLINGAME. P. S. BROOKS.

Apprehending an arrest from the officious interference of Mr. BURLINGAME's friends—I know that no friend of mine would lodge information—at nightfall I left my residence, and went to the house of a friend, for greater security. At about 12 o'clock Gen. LANE called and delivered Mr. BURLINGAME's reply to my note, which was as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 21, 1856.

SIR: Your note of this date was placed in my hands by Gen. LANE this afternoon. In reply, I have to say that I will be at the Clifton House, on the Canada side of Niagara Falls, on Saturday next, at 12 o'clock, M., to "negotiate" in reference to any "difference between us" which, in your judgment, may require settlement "outside of this District."

I have the honor to be,

Your obedient servant.

HON. P. S. BROOKS. A. BURLINGAME.

In order that the public may fully understand the whole matter in relation to Mr. BURLINGAME and myself, it is necessary to revert to events antecedent to the last correspondence between us. Some time during the last month he made a speech in the House of Representatives, and when referring to the assault upon Senator SUMNER he applied this language to myself: "Stole into the Senate Chamber, and struck his brotherss Cain did Abel."

When the sentence was uttered, my friend, Mr. REMY, who knew that I was absent, pronounced it false, under which imputation Mr. BURLINGAME quietly rested. I did not at that time feel it my duty to hold Mr. BURLINGAME responsible for his language, and might perhaps have permitted him and his words to pass. It was not long, however, before intimations from divers sources reached me that the friends of Mr. BURLINGAME were boasting of his various assaults upon me—of his importunes with the ride, which they more than insinuated had come to my ears, in explanation of my forbearance—and that he himself was making capital at home, in consequence of his courageous conduct. In regard to the insult given him by Mr. REMY, it was said that he (Mr. BURLINGAME) would not send, but that he would accept a challenge.

Under these circumstances, I felt that forbearance was no longer a virtue, and requested my friend, Mr. BOCOCK, on the 1st day of July, to go to Mr. BURLINGAME with the simple question, "Would he receive a call from me?" The reply was this short question, is to be found in the following extract from a written statement made to me by Mr. BOCOCK:

"Mr. BURLINGAME then commenced an explanation, which led to a long conversation between us, in the course of which he made many statements which he said were confidential. Omitting these, the answer which he desired me to bear to you was substantially this: that he had no unkind feelings whatsoever for you, but, on the contrary, regarded you as a man of courage and a man of honor—but while he disapproved of the assault on Mr. SUMNER, and felt bound as a Massachusetts man to condemn it, he had designed to discriminate between the man and the act. Let it be remembered that this language was used on the 1st of July, and he had said no more on the subject than his sense of representative duty required. Under these circumstances, he was surprised to find that you had taken exception to anything which he said. In relation to the boasts that had been thrown out in his name, he stated that they had not been authorized by him, but on the contrary he very strongly condemned them and their author; and if, after all this, you

The Taint of Mr. Brooks.

There is an old proverb often administered to children, which warns them that they "cannot eat their cake, and keep it too." Colonel BROOKS seems to think the thing can be done. He has been anxious, ever since his assault upon Senator SUMNER, to secure a personal engagement with any Northern man, who might [illegible] of expressing his sentiments concerning that assault in a manner offensive to him. His purpose was at last accomplished. Mr. BURLINGAME made a speech at which he said that Mr. BROOKS entered the Senate Chamber and "insulted Mr. SUMNER as Cain treats his brother." Being afterwards called upon by friends of Mr. BROOKS, he directed their attention to the obvious fact, that this expression referred to the assault and not to the personal character of the assailant. It was, of course, the right of Mr. BROOKS to take advantage of this distinction, nice as it was, if he saw fit to do so. He availed himself of that right and somewhat ostentatiously published the memorandum in which it was recorded, as an explanation by Mr. BURLINGAME, of the offensive remark contained in his speech. Nothing is thus lost to his injury, and bearing, moreover, the fact that Mr. BROOKS had privately boasted of having again "conquered Massachusetts," Mr. BURLINGAME promptly withdrew it,—and left his speech to its original text. Mr. BROOKS, thereupon challenged him. Mr. BURLINGAME accepted the challenge and fixed the place for the meeting at Niagara Falls, on the Canada side. [illegible] this is an evident and unquestioned and [illegible] right. Col. LAMB, the friend of Col. BROOKS, expressly concedes this in his note to his principal, giving an account of his interview with Mr. BURLINGAME. There was not the slightest shadow of obligation on the part of the latter to notice either time or place with a view to the convenience of Col. BROOKS. Yet upon receiving Mr. BURLINGAME's reply, without a word of remonstrance or complaint addressed to Mr. B. himself, without even submitting to him the objections to the place selected, and the propriety of changing it, after Mr. B. had left the city for the East of arrest, Col. BROOKS refuses the meeting he had himself invited, and rushes into print as if for the express purpose of making it impossible! The reasons which he assigns for this conduct are quite as extraordinary as the conduct itself. He says it was 750 miles,—"through the enemy's country,"—to the place of meeting,—that he could not reach it without being dogged by constables, and that he could not return, if his adversary should fail, without peril of his life. All this betokens a regard for his personal safety quite unusual in a man under such circumstances. Nor has it the slightest foundation in fact. Distance is now measured by time and not by miles; and twenty-four hours from [illegible] Washington, with such precautions as he chose to take, he could reach Niagara Falls, in a direct line, in 18 hours. In this he evinced an unquestioned and [illegible] right. Col. LAMB, the friend of Col. BROOKS, expressly concedes this in his note to his principal, giving an account of his interview with Mr. BURLINGAME. There was not the slightest shadow of obligation on the part of the latter to notice either time or place with a view to the convenience of Col. BROOKS. Yet upon receiving Mr. BURLINGAME's reply, without a word of remonstrance or complaint addressed to Mr. B. himself, without even submitting to him the objections to the place selected, and the propriety of changing it, after Mr. B. had left the city for the East of arrest, Col. COL. FULLER, OF THE NEW-YORK MIRROR, in an editorial of rare force and beauty, hoists the FILLMORE and DAYTON banner, and speaks as follows of
SMUCKER'S LIFE OF FREMONT.
Accurate steel portrait and other illustrations; 600 pp. 12mo. Price, $1.
"It is undoubtedly the best Life of the adventurous 'Pathfinder' yet presented to the American public. It contains, in addition to a careful and interesting narrative of the eventful career of the Republican candidate, the complete journal of his explorations and discoveries in Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon and California, as written by Col. FREMONT. We consider this work the most powerful campaign document yet published; and if circulated as it ought to be, by the tens of thousands, throughout the country, it will do more than the shrewdest wire-pulling of the politicians to secure the success of the gallant Colonel in the Presidential election."
THOUSANDS OF AGENTS WANTED! to sell the above. Very liberal terms given. For full particulars address MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN, Publishers, No. 25 Park row, New-York, or No. 107 Genesee-st., Auburn.

BRADFORD) [illegible] the application for letters of administration upon the estate of JEAREN DU LUX [illegible] the decease of the testatrix, [illegible] the question in course of preparation. It will probably be ready during the second week of next [illegible]. The decision is understood to be in favor of John P. Fearon, the claimant.

This case, which caused considerable sensation at the time of the prosecution of the claim, when the case was heard over by the public Administrator, [illegible] that excited the attention of a [illegible] JEAREN DU LUX was a naturalized citizen of this State. She died intestate on the 16th [illegible] 1852, possessed of personal property valued at [illegible] $20,000. It was supposed that she left no next of kin, but on the application of the Administrator [illegible] John P. Fearon, half-brother, of Closhe [illegible] got in proofs of his heir at law of deceased. [illegible] says, "I believe that I am the only child of said Jearen Du Lux, and know that said JEAREN DU LUX has at times acknowledged me to be her only son, and has at other times addressed me, and spoken of me as her nephew."

A hearing being had, the several parties in interest appeared in person and by counsel, and witnesses were called and examined on both sides. For applicant it appeared from the testimony of people resident in France that she had the reputation of having given birth to a son, but none of them knew of any person of the name of the father. Persons residing in this City testified to the statement and declared having visited together, that she frequently called him her son, and on several occasions acknowledged him as her nephew, remarking in one instance that the Corporation would not get her property, as "her nephew in Gloucester" would come and take possession. They went to church together, and were of the same general appearance; they spoke alike with a similar provincial accent. On cross-examination she remarked that as "the world goes they call him my son; it was a shame for a woman to deny it." She said it was a shame that he had offended her, and she called him her nephew, [illegible] that he was the only one to claim her [illegible].

The Public Administrator also called witnesses, [illegible] several persons who had conversed with her about the propriety of her making a will, to whom she expressed a desire to endow some charity, but made no mention of FEARON. One witness remarked that "the old lady used to take a little drop, whenever would speak of FEARON as her son. Then she would cuddle herself and say "my nephew." Witnesses were also examined, when it appeared that after an adventurous career, he was [illegible] over to this country, where meeting some ill treatment on account of her violent pecuniary [illegible] left her to go to the barber's business, to which she [illegible] great objection.

The Counsel also produced somewhat similar testimony in France, it being understood that she had an illegitimate son, and that she was subsequently married in America. A number of letters were also put in evidence, in which she acknowledgment of relationship, the speaking of him as "nephew," and her addressing her as "mother" and "aunt."

The Surrogate, after giving ample consideration to the law governing like cases, and to the evidence, pro and contra, in great detail, ordered administration to claimant.

WEDNESDAY, July 23—P. M.

The Cunard steamer Persia from Liverpool, Saturday, July 12, arrived at this port early this morning. Her market and money news is a week later than by the previous arrival. The Grain market had improved at Liverpool, owing to an unfavorable turn in the English harvest weather, and the trade at London in English-grown Wheat was also firmer. Indian Corn is quoted 1s. the quarter dearer; Flour 1s. and Wheat 3d. On Saturday afternoon, when the steamer sailed, the weather was more promising, and it is not improbable that this may have weakened the market for Foreign Grain. The Cotton trade keeps steady both at Manchester and Liverpool. The quotations are the same as by the Niagara, and the sales of the week about 35,000 bales, nearly all for delivery to the trade. The speculation in Sugar in London was still on the advance. The English Money market quite easy at 4 ⅌ cent. for outside discounts, and in some instances 3¾ ⅌ cent. per annum was accepted on prime short bills. The Bank of England have not lowered the rate from 4½ ⅌ cent., as some drafts for Gold were making for the Continent, and a further installment upon the new English loan was near at hand. The weekly statement of July 5 shows a decline in the reserve of the Bank of £462,000 sterling, though the total is still £1,758,000 above the average of the month of June. The Bank of France on the official statement of the 1st of July appears to have lost 54,209,511 francs of its Gold reserve, leaving the figures 281,986,685 francs, or about $46,977,337 Federal money against 286,296,196 francs or $57,259,239. English Consols closed 95¾@⅞ for the August accounts, 95¾@⅞ cash; the French Rente, 71.90.

The advices by this opportunity in regard to the American Securities dealt in in London are remarkably firm. We hear through private sources—and the fact is alluded to in one or more of the Circulars—that Mr. EDWIN C. LITCHFIELD, of the Southern Michigan Road, has successfully placed a large amount of the Sinking Fund Bonds of his Company on the London market on terms which, while affording the large English brokers a good margin for an advance in value, yields the concern here a very satisfactory rate. We notice sales in London on the 9th and 10th at 80 ⅌ cent. sterling money, equal to 88 ⅌ cent. here. There has been a further advance in Illinois Centrals, sales at 82¼, and 83 subsequently demanded; Michigan Central 6 ⅌ cents, of 1869, 98@100; sales of New-York Central 7 ⅌ cents, at 96 early in the week, 98 asked at the close; the 6 ⅌ Cents, 83@84; sales of Illinois Free-Lands at 89 ⅌ cent. Eries of 1883 held for 90, and the Sinking Funds for 87 ⅌ cent. The Pennsylvania Central Second Mortgages have advanced to 94@95 ⅌ cent. Over $200,000 of the last mortgage issue of the Cleveland and Pittsburg Company have been taken in London. The orders from the Continent to-day are very slim. There has not been much done in France or Germany for several months. Mr. SATTERTHWAITE writes as follows:

"During the past week there has been an increasing inquiry for American Railroad Bonds; the demand, however, is chiefly confined to those of first class, of which the supply has been inadequate to meet the demand. The present easy state of money has enabled the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana to negotiate a considerable amount of their 7 ⅌ cent. Sinking Fund Bonds, which are being pretty freely taken at 80; it is also reported that the Company have placed an equal amount of their stock, which has been introduced on our Stock Exchange, and is now officially quoted."

Messrs. ROBERT BENSON & Co., on the same subject, write:

"In American Securities there has been much greater activity, and to-day, well known Railway Bonds and State Stocks are inquired for. Illinois Cen. R. R. Construction Bonds 7 ⅌ cents have been sold at 82½, and Freelands at 89@88¾@88. Pennsylvania 1st Mortgage Bonds at 91; 2d Mortgage Sig. Bonds 84¾@85. New-York Central 7 ⅌ cents, at 95¾@96; Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Sinking Fund Bonds at 80, and Erie Bonds of 1883 at 88. The transactions in State Stocks are chiefly purchases—United States 6 ⅌ cents, at 109, ex-Coupon; South Carolina Bonds (Savings' 1869) at 99¾; Pennsylvania 5 ⅌ cent Bonds are quoted 96@98, and Maryland Sig. 98@99 ex-Coupon."

An article appears in the London Times on the Central American question, the tenor of which is to the effect that all difficulty will be removed to a satisfactory understanding between Great Britain and the United States, by the surrender of the Bay Islands to Honduras, and a joint guaranty that an interoceanic communication from the Atlantic to the Pacific through the State of Honduras, shall be kept open to both countries. Gen. HARAN, the Minister of Honduras, was in London, empowered to negotiate on behalf of his own Government, and as between Mr. DALLAS and Lord CLARENDON. The agent of the proposed Honduras Railway was also in London, and the memorandum, which we publish elsewhere, had been sent to the diplomatic representatives of the United States, France and Great Britain.

Very little account was taken of the Foreign news on the Stock Exchange to-day, where the business continues comparatively light, and prices closed dull, although fairly supported at the early board. The last price of Erie was 62¾@⅞; Reading, 92@92¾; New-York Central, 93@93¾; and Illinois Central 7 ⅌ cents, 82¾@83. Missouri 6 ⅌ cents recovered ¼ ⅌ cent. of the recent decline, selling to the extent of $40,000, at 85¾ ⅌ cent. The advance in Nicaragua Transit shares has been lost, and sales were forced to-day as low as 9¾@9¾ ⅌ cent. No cause is publicly assigned, for either the rise to 11¼, or the present reaction to the late low figure. The Reading dividend was declared at Philadelphia to-day, 4 ⅌ cent., payable in cash, on the 6th August. The Manhattan Gas Company have declared 62¾ the share on their full stock, and 96¾ cents a share on their scrip stock. The Galena and Chicago half yearly dividend of 5 ⅌ cent., will be paid on 15th August.

The steamer Africa sailed to-day with $1,122,950 in Gold and Silver, a sum larger by $900,000 than was calculated on yesterday. The rates of Exchange closed on England 109¾@110; France 5.17½@5.15. There is no change in Money affairs to-day. Brokers' loans are in fair demand at 6 ⅌ cent., with a good supply of means for employment in this way. The wants of the Importing trade continue to be large at Bank, though there is a material falling off in the Custom-House payments this week. The Sub-Treasury received, to-day, $155,232, including $20,000 in Gold received by express from Iowa; the disbursements $98,808 on Treasury drafts, and $34,851 on Government officers' checks. The regular balance this afternoon was $7,701,009.
